

Following the beautiful game to Africa's forgotten places

While the world's attention is focused on the World Cup, Africa's children are playing the beautiful game across the continent, kicking balls made from scraps with their bare feet. 'Football Muti' is a collection of photographs by Robin Goode, Matteo Bottanelli and Kabir Javier that gives pause for thought about the far reaches of football in the world's poorest places, and in this book's case, the dusty playgrounds of Africa. The book is published by Jacana.
